*The Recovery district operated 22 schools last year, but three of those schools have moved into different categories this year. One, Julius Rosenwald Elementary, will close, and its building will be taken over by the Algiers Technology Academy, under the management of the Algiers Charter Schools Association. Another, McDonogh No. 42, will become a Recovery District charter, and a third, Reed Elementary, will be reopened with new staff and students this school year, in modular buildings on the original Reed High campus.
Because the Recovery District can't yet accurately predict growth in enrollment, these schools will be opened only as student demand warrants.
Partnership with University of New Orleans
*List of RSD charters does not include the six Recovery District-approved charters operated by the Algiers Charter Schools Association.
List of Orleans Parish School Board-approved charters does not include two charters listed in the Algiers Charter Schools Association.
